HEADQUARTERS
734th FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION
APO 230, U. S. Army

2 May 1945

SUBJECT: After-Action Report for Month of April 1945.

TO : The Adjutant General, U.S. Army, Washington 25, D.C. (Thru Channels)

The battalion CP was located in GORSROTH (340809) on 1 April, the third CP location since the battalion crossed the Rhine at St GOARS in the 89th Div sector on 29 March.

Due to the rapid advances of the army forces, artillery fire was negligible, the battalion being occupied mainly with the clearing of wooded areas and towns of German stragglers who had been bypassed by our armored units.

A new CP was established at GORZHAIN (H192471) on 3 April, where the battalion was relieved of duty with the 333d Field Artillery Group and attached to the 174th Field Artillery Group.

On 5 April the battalion moved to OBERSUHL (H613636), and from these positions delivered its first fire of any consequence since crossing the Rhine. Battery C was attached temporarily to 81st Field Artillery Battalion.

The battalion was relieved from duty with 174th Field Artillery Group on 7 April, attached to 220th Field Artillery Group, and proceeded to a new location at OBERELLEN (720639). About 1730, shortly after occupying the new position, Battery B was strafed by enemy aircraft, but suffered no casualties. These were the first enemy planes observed by personnel of this unit since crossing the Rhine.

During the following day, 8 April, the battalion moved to WIPPERODA (L058567), transferred from 220th Field Artillery Group to control of 7th Tank Destroyer Group, and assumed new duties consisting of guarding vital military installations and lines of communication in VIII Corps area. Battery B was attached to G-1 of VIII Corps for similar duties. The battalion was used in this capacity from the eighth of April until the twenty-sixth of April.

On 27 April, four days after having been relieved of assignment with Third Army and assigned to First Army (23 April), the battalion once again became operational under the control of 18th Field Artillery Group.

Attached for duty with 203d Field Artillery Group on 28 April, the battalion moved south to establish a CP in the vicinity of SELB (P152822). These are our positions as the month of April closes.

HEADQUARTERS
734th FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION
APO 339, U. S. Army

3 June 1945

SUBJECT: After-Action Report for Period 1 through 9 May 1945.

TO : The Adjutant General, U.S. Army, Washington 25, D.C. (Thru Channels)

The battalion, on 1 May 1945, was in general support of the 1st Infantry Division, attached to 203d Field Artillery Group, with the battalion in position in the vicinity of SELB, Bavaria (wP1484). The battalion CP was located in SELBEN Ww (wP152822), within two and a half miles of the Czechoslovakian border. On 2 May the battalion received orders to move to the north, into the 87th Infantry Division sector, with the mission of general support of the 87th Division and the 6th Cavalry Group. The battalion CP was established in GR. FRIESEN (wK169191), with batteries going into position in the vicinity. From this position the battalion fired a total of 440 rounds. Among other targets, the town of ADORF (wK218009), Heinrich Himmlers home town, was hit.

On 6 May the battalion moved by echelon to positions in the vicinity of POPPENGRUN (wK257158), the battalion command post being established in the town. From this position the battalion fired one concentration, its last in the European Theater. The concentration consisted of 24 rounds of high explosive fired on the town of SCHONHEIDE (wK355251) at 062330B by C Battery. Effective at 061800B the battalion passed to operational control of the Ninth United States Army, and was attached thereto on 11 May.

At 070540B the battalion received the order to cease firing in the division sector. Although no orders reached the battalion that the European phase of the war was over, it was assumed to have been so from the concurrent news reports received on the commercial radio. A state of alert was maintained until the evening of 9 May, at which time the battalion fire direction center was closed down and the batteries given close station.
